

Simon Barnett

WP & FRONT STACK DEV

Front Stack? Yes, it's my own term, and it doesn't seem to be used anywhere. But I hope it conveys that I've done full, but do front. I've worked with Roots Sage, but generally use a Local by FlyWheel workflow.

PERSONAL INFORMATION

Techy designer / stylish dev, jack-of-many trades, especially a few.

b. 1970, emerging from my family's DTP/print business, I bring the fastidiousness of having been at the mercy of a massive printing press to bear on my pixel-perfect renditions of static web mockups, which lately has included page builders, now branching into front end library / frameworks, starting with Vue.js.

WORK EXPERIENCE

1985 - 1987 / Diocesan College

DTP / GRAPHIC DESIGNER

I typeset the house and school magazines on an Apple II, so more like Dot Matrix Publishing, but I learnt adaptability, which included the arrival of the Mac.

1993 - 1994, 2000 - 2002 / Mactrain College

DTP / WEB LECTURER

Bleeding edge tech = teach first, struggle with questions later.

1994 - 2003, 2008 - 2010 / Various

WEB / DTP / GRAPHIC DESIGNER

I worked for various companies including two 3-year stints in design / dtp / multimedia / web, one in London, UK, before deciding to freelance as a web developer.

2003 - 2008, 2011 - Current / Freelance

WEB DEVELOPMENT

I find the variety of freelancing highly compelling, and allows the flexibility required given the pace of change. A contract or permanent position would preferably include this element of discovery.

As part of my routine up-skilling, I'm currently converting my medication tapering calculator to Vue.js as a phase 1, which, depending on workload, may include adding a range of services, such as user accounts and profiles.
